November By the Numbers
Monthly Key Economic Indicators

1,129,450
Broadway attendees

337,864
Average daily pedestrian count in Times Square

89,206
Total SF leased in Times Square

On November 1, Times Square Alliance unveiled the Show Globes exhibition to pay tribute to the creativity of Broadway designers and the power of live theatre.

3 new stores
Opened in Times Square

Average Daily Visitors
Pedestrian Count

Pedestrian counts dropped slightly from October to November.

This month, the average daily pedestrian count was 337,864, a 10.7% decrease from November 2018.

On Friday, November 1, temperatures and pedestrian counts reached their peaks at 72 degrees and 391,863 people.

Source: Springboard
In November, the Times Square Class A commercial office occupancy rate dropped slightly from October to 92%, but remained higher than Midtown's rate of 90%.

Between September and November, Times Square net effective rent remained unchanged at $63 per square foot. Net effective rent in Midtown saw a sharp increase this month to $78 per square foot.

In October, average daily room rates in Times Square fell by 6.3% from 2018 to $294. This is on par with Midtown and Manhattan rates, which fell by 5.9% and 5.6% respectively.

Occupancy rates in all markets observed a slight decline, yet Times Square's occupancy rate of 93.6% continues to exceed those of Midtown and Manhattan.
In November, Broadway ticket sales declined from last year to an average of $32.8 million per week. This month, average weekly attendance reached 282,363 patrons, a 4.1% decrease from November 2018.

In total, 37 Broadway shows played this month. November openings included A Christmas Carol and Slava's Snowshow.

Source: The Broadway League
In October, we celebrated the opening of three restaurants and retail shops, including BarDough at 350 W 46th Street and Paramount Hotel Bar & Cafe at 235 W 46th Street. In the coming months, we look forward to the opening of eight new food and retail shops.